

Professional football is about speed, cunning, ability, intelligence and brute strength. But not all NFL football players run 4.5 second 40 yard dashes or bench press 400 lbs. What happens after the final whistle blows, the helmets come off, the fans go home and the last interview is completed?

What if Isaac Bruce uncovered the ten plagues of California?

What if Keyshawn Johnson sang a rap version of the Star Spangled Banner?

What if Emmitt Smith discovered the 13th astrological sign?

What if Donovan McNabb sang with the Three Tenors?

What if Brian Urlacher told the story of The Three Bears?

What happens when Randy Moss seeks answers from his Fisher Price See-N-Say?

These answers are discovered in 32 pun packed, humorous fictional short stories in Fantasy Football, Where Do I Sign?

With his satirical wit, Steve Kay digs deep to uncover what no other sports journalist has uncovered:

Tony Gonzalez was part of the R&B group Toni! Tony! Tone!

Jerome Bettis started out as the "Truck" before becoming the "Bus."

Tiki and Ronde Barber's father studied at the Tammy Faye Bakker school of Beaute'

Rich Gannon studied Cannon Law at the University of Delaware.

Ray Lewis recites a version of Edgar Allen Poe's The Raven.

All of these and more are in Fantasy Football, Where Do I Sign, Steve Kay's irreverent, revealing, and comical insight into the greatest players in the NFL. No matter how well you think you know NFL players, you don't really know them until you've read the fictional stories of Fantasy Football, Where Do I Sign?
